

Presentation

Wrong Indeed performance group is an ensemble of artists that gravitates around theatre, dance and performance.

We want to propose a project called “When the battle is lost and won” that unites a collective of actors, performers, dancers and amateurs to create a performative theatre event.

This piece takes place in two sections: the first, “Instant Karma”, is an open workshop that is based on the study of contemporary photography, physical training and improvisations that put each participant at the centre of the scene with his/her own individual experiences and perceptions.

The second part is a veritable experimental performative platform and play, loosely based on the play “The hour in which we knew nothing of each other”. It is a revisitation of universal themes (existence, human meetings, relationships and feelings, pain and joys, etc) set up in a contemporary context, with performers passing by in a big open space, encounters taking place, improvised dances and interactions. It is a silent vision of a poetic and chaotic world, a performance made of shards, of situations, of images.

“The hour we know nothing of each other”, is a mirror of today's society, coming alive with the work and research of a group of artists and local groups and various communities that will come on stage, taking before the audience a point of observation, a moment of reflection to which spectators will participate by becoming testimonies of this flux of lives and happenings where actors truly become and expose their vulnerability.